

Dermoneuromodulation: Manual Therapy for People in Pain

Dermoneuromodulating enables manual and movement therapies to treat pain via cutaneous and cranial nerves.

Every form of manual and movement therapy relies on neurophysiological mechanisms. Dermoneuromodulation (DNM) training examines some of the anatomy, physiology, and other factors that affect treatment outcomes from a biopsychosocial perspective. This is a practical approach to manual and movement therapy that reflects the consensus of current pain science.

Dermoneuromodulation (DNM) applications reflect interactive approaches to manual therapy that use positioning of limbs and torso to affect deeper nerve trunks, combined with skin stretch to positively affect cutaneous nerves and relieve pain. Client education and self-care are also addressed. This class includes 21 hours of training, including both upper and lower body applications.

Dermoneuromodulation Seminar

- Concordia University, 4090 Geddes Rd, Ann Arbor, MI 48105
- January 10-12, 2020
- Early Registration $425 (by 12/21/2019), otherwise $475
- Instructor: Jason Erickson, NCBTMB Approved Provider #308 JasonE Seminars, CE Broker Approved for Florida and Georgia MTs. Assisted by Lawrence Adams.

Jason Erickson is a former chronic pain patient turned trainer, manual therapist, & internationally recognized educator. He teaches CE classes on pain science, manual therapy, practical applications for health and fitness professionals, and related topics.

What to Bring: Face cradle covers, linens, and a large pillow. Participants will receive a DNM manual to keep and are encouraged to take notes. All participants should dress in layers, wearing clothing that permits ease of movement in all directions. We will be working with all areas of the body, and easy access to skin-on-skin contact is encouraged. However, all participants will be clothed at all times. Tank/strap/sports tops and shorts are ideal. No creams/oils/lubricants will be used.

Testimonial

"What is this MAGIC you've taught us?!! I used the DNM techniques on 4 people this week and all 4 returned, after the first or second treatment, with virtually no pain. Like, it just wasn't there. Crazy! I also used it on a pelvic pain patient using internal points of pain with the dycem on either her inner thighs or lower abdomen. She left feeling much better and I'm anxious to see how she is next visit! If you're interested, I'll update you. Seriously, thank you! I'm sold and will be registering for July!" - Kirstin B., PT
